

Press Release

20something is all about fun and entertainment Sunday, 10 September at 1.30pm and 17 September at 12pm

Make new acquaintances, learn to appreciate art, check out our movie and book reviews, or just be entertained! It's all happening on 20something with Namhla Ndlovu and Shashi Naidoo, every Sunday around lunchtime, free on e.

TX: 10 September at 1.30pm.

We chat to Banele and Wandile, two music producers from Semitone. The duo is well known for their fine production and hit making magic, and has produced hit tracks for some well known Mzansi acts such as Skwatta Kamp, HHP and My Man. They are in studio to talk to us about where it all started, and their future plans in the industry.

We chat to Artist Bongi Bengu. Bongi, grew up in exile with her family in Geneva, Switzerland. She started studying art at high school and has been painting since she was 16 years old. She later completed a Bachelor of Arts degree in Washington DC, and did her masters at the University of Cape Town. Her works have not only been exhibited all over South Africa and around the world, and won numerous accolades.

We preview the movie "Ant Bully". Ten-year-old Lucas is the new kid on the block – and the local bullies make sure he knows it. Tired of being a punching bag, Lucas takes out his frustration on the ants living in his lawn. But when the ants strike back, shrinking Lucas down to their size with a magic potion and forcing him to live like an ant within the colony, an astonishing new world opens up to him. Lucas learns, first-hand, the value of friendship and teamwork.

We play out with Ntando's 'Nguwe'.

TX: 17 September at 12pm

We review the book "Diary of a Manhattan Call girl" with a 20something fan Jodene. The book is a fictional diary of an upscale hooker in New York City. It follows the life of Nancy Chan, who has been "in the business" for most of her life. She started out in her teens turning tricks in hotel lobbies, and then worked for an escort service. After that escort service is shut down, she starts working for a madam. Eventually, she ends up working solo with an appointment book of regulars.

We chat to Blk Sonshine about their music. The group is currently in studio working on their second album and we want to find more about what has been happening since the release of their debut album in 2001. Neo and Masauko who are members of the group, are in studio to talk about their musical influences, the themes and subjects that they deal with in their music.

We play out with a special 20something song from Blk Sonshine.
