

Press Release

This Week on 3rd Degree Tuesday 21 February @ 8pm

Once the best team on the African continent; Bafana Bafana bombed out of the 2006 African Cup of Nations without scoring a single point. As has become the tradition in South African football the “blaming game” started before the team even touched down.

Fans are outraged at the dismal performance.

But realistically the inexperienced squad that left for Egypt was destined to fail.

So where does the blame lie?

The coach and the players were easy targets, but the truth is the team's poor performance only served to shine the spotlight on SAFA (South African Football Association), the administrative body.

This week 3rd Degree looks into the state of South African football and asks who's to blame.
