

Press Release

Final Six Feet Under: Season Five Monday 31 July at 9pm

DEATH BECOMES THEM

Just as you thought that the cast of Six Feet Under might be dead and buried, they are back. Indeed, the wacky morticians and their cohorts are making a welcome return on Monday nights on e.tv at 9pm.

This is the fifth and last season of Six Feet Under. If you are a fan, you will know that theirs is a world of beautified cadavers, sexy morticians and darkly disturbed people.

Six Feet Under continues to focus on the cathartic journey of the extended Fisher family, whose personal trials and tribulations are played out against the solemn backdrop of an independent funeral parlour in LA.

Following Nate's (Peter Krause) proposal to Brenda (Rachel Griffiths) at the last season, they prepare for the big day. But what will happen?

This show has been a runaway hit right from the beginning and was created, co-written and executive produced by Alan Ball, who wrote the hit film American Beauty (winner of five Oscars).

Six Feet Under has been nominated for two 2004 Golden Globes, with Frances Conroy (Ruth Fisher, the mother) winning for Best Actress in a Television Series - Drama, and it won two 2004 Screen Actors Guild Awards (Conroy and the ensemble cast).

The show has received 32 Emmy nominations, won seven times, and has been nominated for eight Golden Globes, winning three. Actors include Peter Krause (as Nate Fisher), Michael C. Hall (David Fisher), Lauren Ambrose (Claire Fisher), Frances Conroy (Ruth Fisher), Rachel Griffiths (Brenda Chenowith) and Freddy Rodríguez (Federico Diaz).
