

Press Release

Judge for Yourself Sunday 6 August at 6.30pm

Judge Dennis Davis makes a welcome return to e.tv in a brand-new season of Judge For Yourself, on Sunday 6 August at 6.30pm. There will be 13 programmes and the first three shows will be one-hour specials. The remaining 10 will be half-an-hour long.

Judge Davis is one of South Africa's most respected citizens. Over the years, his distinguished career in law and insightful books on legal issues and politics have made him a household name.

As a well-known television personality, viewers are already familiar with his keen sense of humour and razor-sharp wit. Judge For Yourself is a series of challenging programmes that takes a critical look at various aspects of South African life.

This weekly series is not only for influential decision makers, politicians or for the legal fraternity, it's for anyone interested in knowing their rights and examining the big constitutional issues that sharply divide popular opinion as well as the passions that drive our country after more than a decade of democracy.

The show is produced by senior e.tv journalist and anchor, Melanie Rice, and promises to be relevant, entertaining and credible. Tune in as Dennis Davis weighs in on some fascinating and highly charged topics and examines the distance South Africa has travelled since its first democratic elections.

Some of the issues that will be under discussion include Black Economic Empowerment and Affirmative Action, the World Cup 2010 and plagiarism.
