Let's Fix It Tuesday 29 August at 8.30pm

Amapondo Children's Project & Zwelandile J.S.S. School

In this episode: Let's Fix It ventures to the Eastern Cape. They meet children at the Amapondo Children's Project, Surf Development School, launched on 4 March at Second Beach in Port St Johns.

Surfing has opened doors to many young individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds. It gives them freedom to express themselves as they never have before.

They also visit Zwelandile, a small rural school 22 km outside Butterworth. It has 250 pupils starting from grade one through to grade nine. The pupils are hardworking and eager to learn. Although the school is poor, all the pupils and teachers have a vision to empower themselves no matter what the circumstances.

They focus on developing creative skills and empowering children with practical lessons such as home economics, bead work, needlework and art classes.
