Let's Fix It Tuesday 24 October at 8.30pm

Let's Fix It brings you the touching story about a Cape Town couple, Ann and Chubasco Phillips, who scraped money together to buy an old bus. They did this to bring the fun of touring to the poorest of the poor, but they desperately needed exposure.

Host Samm Marshall decided it would be a great idea to cover it bumper-to-bumper with colourful, attractive images. He arranged for a graphic designer and printer to work together to design its new look and have the fresh images mounted.

Co-incidentally, Let's Fix It also visits a troupe of ballroom dancers who face eviction and need both a new venue and a ride to future dance competitions. They take the kids to the V&A Waterfront to raise money to fund their dreams – and in future the new bus will be the troupe's transport.

Ironically, the 'bus couple' used to be dancers themselves in years gone by. Although the dance school is four-years-old, they are battling financially. The group of 34 kids had been given notice to move from their premises, and in addition, they have to borrow uniforms and shoes from one another. Let's Fix It helps them all with new dance costumes, new shoes, and the experience of a lifetime.
