

Press Release

MADHOUSE Starting April 4, 2007 at 8pm

Is it an animal? Is it a madman? No, it's a contestant on e.tv's new LIVE game show, Madhouse, which kicks-off Wednesday 4 April at 8pm. Without any doubt, the title says it all: Madhouse is a light-hearted programme taking the mickey out of people so that fun can be had by all.

How will it work? An sms will be randomly selected in studio and the contestant will be called live. SMS contestants will watch a pre recorded clip. For example, the contestant will have to guess how long it will take for a street participant to complete a wacky challenge. The first contestant to guess the correct answer wins an instant cash prize of R2000 to R3000 depending on the challenge.

Each week has a different challenge. Other street challenges include someone eating hotdogs in one minute wearing boxing gloves and a whole lot of other crazy things. At the end of each month there will be a Jokes Contest and four contestants get to tell their funniest joke! There's also a brand new car to win, as well as R100 000 in prizes.

Mega prizes to be won. Have fun.

Nobuntu Dubazana:
Presenter Madhouse

Nobuntu Dubazana is the new kid on the block. Take a funky Mohawk then mix it with jugs of attitude what do you get? A crazy and zany Nobuntu! Buy her good shoes and she will be your friend forever. While in New York with some friends they rented an apartment in Queens.

The place was really cold and the wiring was bad. After a five day stay, their apartment burnt down with all their belongings including her best shoes.

In 2005 Nobuntu played a geek in Pinky Pinky and now her big break in Madhouse is set to blow your mind. Her favourite Miseducation of Lauren Hill CD might have many scratches, but she continues to play it. She bought the CD when she was only thirteen.

Nervous Conditions by Tsitsi Dangarembga, The Unbearable Lightness of Being by Milan Kundera are her top books and she loves all types of music especially music that dominated the eighties. Trancesky Bar, Melville is the place to be and when she is not out having fun she enjoys making people feel uncomfortable by randomly greeting people she doesn't know.
