POPSTARS Extra

This year, POPSTARS adds that something special in the form of POPSTARS Extra, the weekly highlights package airing every Wednesday as of 15 September. POPSTARS Extra delves into the personalities of those people that make POPSTARS great: the contestants, the production team and the judges as the series travels across the country. Viewers can look forward to impromptu interviews with contestants, sneak-peaks at what the judges are up to behind the scenes and the toils that the crew need to go through to organise such an awesome production such as POPSTARS.

The POPSTARS judges, PJ Powers, Zwai Bala and Azania Ngoro are no strangers to POPSTARS and will definitely be keeping contestants on their toes throughout their journey. PJ Powers is one of South Africa's best performing artists and has been rocking audiences since the age of 19. Her solo career launched in 1987 and has been at the forefront of music in the country. PJ, nicknamed "Thandeka", shot to stardom when she collaborated with Ladysmith Black Mambazo on "World in Union", the theme-song of the 1995 World Cup.

Zwai Bala has been involved in music since an early age and has since his Drakensberg Boys Choir days, been living the music dream. This musical director, composer, singer, songwriter, arranger, teacher and public speaker has come a long way since his TKZee days. Zwai has worked on previous seasons of POPSTARS, including POPSTARS East Africa.

Azania Ngoro, popular radio DJ, presenter and MC, is no stranger to POPSTARS. Azania, who was a judge on POPSTARS on previous seasons started her career co-hosting "The Joint", a popular TV programme and has since been extensively involved with television and radio production.

Our sexy host is Martin Phike, former member of POPSTARS winning group Ghetto Lingo. Martin has been performing since the age of 16 where he started in musicals and plays at school. Martin was exposed to the professional industry of music when he formed part of pop groups Max Cui as well as Inadiflo. Martin's brother, Given, encouraged him to audition for POPSTARS in 2004. A very unprepared Martin took the plunge and came out on top, forming part of the band named Ghetto Lingo who later released two albums. While working on the Ghetto Lingo albums, producer D'Rex interested Martin in a solo album and as they say, they rest is history. Martin is an accomplished singer, actor, performer and song-writer and even had a solo album nominated for a SAMA Award in 2008. Martin's roots are firmly planted in gospel and church and says all his accomplishments are thanks to God.

Some interesting facts about Martin Phike:

- Martin's favourite food is 'mdogo', a traditional kind of bread and also Italian food, especially pasta.
- His hobbies are keeping fit and spending time in the gym, song-writing and spending time with his 4-month-old baby girl.
- Martin isn't exempt from embarrassing moments. He recently performed on stage at a church event and pulled a signature spin and flip and tore his pants from top to bottom. Martin then bowed and 'moon-walked' off Michael Jackson-style trying to avoid the audience seeing his ripped pants.
- Martin's first POPSTARS audition didn't go according to plan, much because of a party and night-on-the-town the evening before the auditions. Martin was shocked to hear the quality of the contestants and realised that he had to up his game if he wanted to take any more part in POPSTARS
- The workshop week that took place during POPSTARS in 2004 was highlighted for Martin by two significant incidents: the rest of the contestants making fun of his weird hairdo as well as the nerve-wrecking "Green Mile", where contestants need to walk down a long passageway to the judges for them to decide their fate on whether they stay or go home.

Says Martin Phike: "It is such a blessing for me to be the host of a production as awesome as POPSTARS. It really is a great step up for me in terms of my career and I look forward to hosting POPSTARS in the most unique and freshest way possible. Contestants should look out for my hand-held camera that I have with me all the time!"
